and Macdonald avenue as soon as
work of remodeling the new store
in the Hissler building is complete, according to announcement of J. S. Basham, proprietor of pected that the Hissler building will be ready for occupancy by

ENGINEER WINS
COURT APPEALVictor Lougheed, San Francisco
engineer now in San Quentin prison under sentence of attempted rape, was yesterday
granted a new trial by the Appellate Court, according to word received from San Francisco last night.Lougheed was found guilty of charges preferred by Miss Esther Leighton, Eastbay newspaper
solicitor, by a jury in the court of Judge H. V. Alvarado September 16, last, and soon after his attorneys M. Doyle and W. J. Cullhan filed an appeal.In granting the new trial the Appellate Court held that there was no evidence that the complainant resisted to the "utmost,"
or that the act was committed
"by force or violence."Miss Leighton charged that after she went with Lougheed when she alleged, he promised to acquire subscription for her, he drove her into the Berkeley hills and attacked her.She failed to put in an appearance at the trial and Lougheed was convicted on a confession he is said to have made at the sheriff's office when taken to prison.Pending his appeal he was ordered committed to San Quentin.

tion work of Richmond's new high school, were visited by Fred Ramsdell, city superintendent of schools in Pittsburg, and George Douglas, inspector of the Pittsburg school district yesterday, for the purpose of inspecting the new high school building.Interest in Richmond's high school by these men, is due to the fact that there is a similar project under construction in Pittsburg, where J. S. Hannah, contractor of the local Woodrow Wilson grammar school is building a $200,000 school. Stone is the architect for the Pittsburg
school.Pittsburg Jail Will

Speech Flaws
Among Pupils
Reported LowDefective speech by more than two percent of the children in the Richmond schools is reported by H. W. Kaar, speech specialist, employed by the school district,
in a talk at the Public Health Center yesterday morning.Recent legislation of the state provides specialists to visit and conduct classes for defective in speech and Kaar will visit Richmond every Thursday with a special class on Saturday for more seriously affected children.Foreign accent, baby talk, and flipping are the most common defects in speech among the pupils of the lower grades, according to Kaar, who stated that this condition is easily remedied.
Defects caused by fear are the hardest cases to correct as things outside the child's life must be remedied to affect a cure."Fools" Sermon

29 County ResidentsContra Costa today has twenty-nine new citizens, granted naturalization papers by Superior Judge
H. V. Alvarado following examination of a class of forty-five applicants by S. B. Johnson, of San Francisco, United States naturalization examiner.Citizenship was denied to only one man, Giuseppe Cioles, of Richmond, refusal of the grant being made because Cioles failed to specify on his application that he had once been arrested in Richmond on a minor complaint. The court, however, denied the application without prejudice, thus permitting Cioles to apply again after ninety days. Other applicants were required to give further study and their hearing was put over to the next quarterly examination.U. S. Engineer's Office To Gather Data For Re-SurveyUnited States Harbors and rivers engineer's office in San Francisco has asked all steamship companies, railroads, and industrial concerns to present their views and data on the present Richmond harbor program, that the engineer's office may have all available information when it requests a survey of the harbor.Following is the statement, requested by the engineer's office:
"The existing project provides for a channel 600 feet wide and 24 feet deep water in San Francisco bay off Point Richmond to Ellis Slough, about one mile north of Point Potrero, with a suitable turn at Point Potrero, and a training wall extending westward
from Brooks Island for a total length of about 10,000 feet. The portions of the channel and training wall so far as completed are shown on recent editions of the United States Coast and GeodeticSurvey Chart No. 5532.
"The modification of the project requested by local interests at this time is the deepening of the full length of the channel to 31 feet for a width of 400 feet,
except at the turn at Point Potrero and the local widening at the upper end of the project,
where it is proposed that the deepening extend over the full channel.
"For the purpose of studying the advisability of making the proposed deep-water channel, it is requested that steamship interests, industries, railroad companies and other interested parties furnish this office, on or before February 8, 1928, data relative to the commerce and particularly to the savings over present costs
which would result from the proposed channel in Richmond harbor."450 WITNESS

Oakland TuesdayOakland is determined to secure the five-cent zone street car fare approved by the State Railroad commission and when the hearing of the Key System Transit company comes before the commission in Oakland Tuesday morning, the Oakland city attorney will be prepared to oppose strongly any change from the zone plan, according to an announcement made yesterday.The railroad commission will ask for a trial of the Mott plan,
as the two-zone five-cent fare
plan is known. The Key System has fought this plan on the grounds that it will not be of benefit to the company now in financial difficulties. The railroad commission, after investigating the zone system, ordered it enforced December 1, 1927. The Key System sought and was granted a rehearing.Mira Vista To

Canal Builder
Succumbs To
Long IllnessNEW YORK, Jan. 21.—General
George W. Goethals, who built two America's apart, shortening sea lanes and magnifying America's defensive power, died at his home here at noon today.
The builder of the Panama
Canal was in his seventieth year.
Death came to him after a long illness.The chance of having been taken by Secretary of War Taft on an inspection trip to Panama led him to be cast into what was perhaps the biggest engineering role of the century. But his arrival at the side of Taft on that historic trip was one of the romantic journeys which has the ring, almost, of fiction.He was born in Brooklyn, of thirty Dutch parentage. At 11 he was helping the family, being employed as an errand boy. At the dignity of 14 years he was a bookkeeper. He made $15 a week and used every spare hour at books.Winning entrance to City College he listened to lectures from West Point and graduated everyone he could from U. S. Grant downward, until a congressman gave him a West Point appointment.He was successively an instructor at West Point, an engineer on the Ohio river dredging job and chief of a corps of engineers in the Spanish-American war.The task which confronted him
when Roosevelt and Taft elected him to finish the canal was one of staggering proportions. French engineers had failed; private contractors were floundering; and nature herself seemed bent on balking this attempt at severing the two continents she had joined together. Disease and the sheer force of tropical growth and the rust of its mists were the chief enemies. Goethals had to fight His victory was a victory of sanitation, as well as of engineering. The late General Gorgas, working under Goethals, mastered
the typhoid threat, and subsequently made the canal some a pence fit to live in.On the engineering side Goethals moved a mountain and dammed a swift and treacherous river, building a huge lock.National Hotel
To Be ReopenedJ. V. McAfee, hotel man of Fresno, will be the manager of the National Hotel which has just been re-opened on Standard avenue near the Standard Oil company refinery. Renovations have been made and new furniture installed. Novel ideas for the entertainment of guests have been worked out. One of the features of the hotel will be a southern kitchen, where "good eats" will be prepared. Much effort has been put forth to make the place comfortable and homelike.English Girl Wins

THE NON-VOTING CITIZEN

Ralph M. Eastley of New York, who is the guiding star and is the end of the organization which for years been carrying on campaigns to arouse people to do their voting, is about to launch a new crusade. He has been visiting Washington seeking information as to the best way to arouse good citizens who do not vote as to their political and moral responsibilities. Eastley is a man of vitality courage and persistence, but he will need the best that is in him if he is going to accomplish the results which he seeks.

The non-voting citizen is a real problem. As a result of his existence our congressional representatives in all parties are selected by minorities. The same situation prevails in many municipal and state governments. The extraordinarily increasing total of municipal and state expenditures, and the ascending scale of tax rates can be laid at the door of this minority representation. Our governments today are largely manned by men who represent the tax eaters rather than the taxpayers.

The six o'clock voter is in the middle and the "nice" citizen who belonged in the ten o'clock voting category at that hour now is hastening to his golf links. As a result the six o'clock voter names the man who spends the money. The ten o'clock group only appear as cultural objectors to public waste and extravagance which has been accomplished and is beyond correction. How to arouse these people is hard to determine.

We have them voting booths almost at their doors; we have provided mail voting systems and even transportation, but their actual participation in the government still remains at a low ebb. It may be that we will have to wait until as a result of this wholesale non-participation in voting a political catastrophe, which can be laid directly at their door, arouses them.

ONE BEHIND HER BACK

As soon as other nations saw soviet Russia's gesture of universal complete disarmament, they all wanted to know what she had in her other hand.—Detroit Free Press.

Manager Busky Harris of the Washington baseball team is the proud father of a new baby boy. This probably means that Bucky will have to get some of his sleep between innings.

King George says that Great Britain has no intention of embarking on a naval increasing program. All right, as soon as we get our 25 new cruisers built we will be ready to listen to him.

Crop reduction always works fine for the farmers who don't reduce.

Higher education in this country is seriously threatened. The supply of coonskins is running short.

WISE CRACKS from the BIG TOWN by Walter Winchell

THE YEAR'S BEST SMILES

The col'm is in receipt of Frank J. Wistach's best smile selections for the 1927 season. Mr. Wistach's book of smiles is eagerly awaited by the members of the allied theatrical professions and it is common chatter that the cinema title-writers are helpless without it. When we last reprinted them a dozen of the flicker industry's better known wits telegraphed money orders and urged that copies of the interesting compilation be mailed to Hollywood. Since then various smiles from the book have proved to be film theatre silence-wreckers.

If Mr. Wistach can be proof-read the simile "As impersonal as a hairdresser's touch," which he credits to Anon, was submitted to Your Broadway and Mine by Lillian Hellman, who is Mrs. Arthur Kober. At any rate, the following Wistach favorites many of which were contributed here first, follow:

Conceded as the nurse who was praised by a delirious patient.—Anon.

He looked like the last hope of an old maid.—Anon.

Difficult as borrowing money from a rich wife.—Anon.

Optimistic as the woman who opened a gift-shop in Scotland.—Anon.

Women, like cats, are the only domestic animals impossible to tame.—Margot Asquith.

As much surprise element as the sequence of H. I. J. and K.—Robert C. Benchley.

Broadminded as the Princeton alumnus who bought his bonds from a Harvard graduate.—Anon.

Barren as Death Valley, where the jack-rabbits carry lunch baskets.—Anon.

Exciting as hitting in the Metropolitan Museum and copying down old masters.—Heywood Brown.

He had a taste in his mouth like the break-up of a hard winter.—Cary W. Bok.

Conspicuous as a girl's little finger at mealtime.—Walter Cox.

Free as a Scotch election is from bribery.—Russell Crouse.

Dejected as a man in the rumble seat of a roadster.—Frank Condon.

Regular as the little ice cubes made by Frigidaire.—Alan Dale.

Homelier than the "chorus girls" in a college variety show.—Irving Druzman.

Mrs Stout Can Slenderize By Wearing Proper Dress

DEAR MME. HALL DEANE:

For several months I have been out of town and while I was away my apartment was rented to a family that almost left the place to ruin. I had several nice pieces of furniture which were not broken and scratched. They were badly soiled and spotted. Do you know of any safe way to clean them?

Also will you please advise me regarding a nethermost dress? I am very stout. Do you think it would be advisable to make such a dress with removable sleeves so that I could also make use of it for dinner wear? Please suggest color and material. Thanks.

Wistach's book of smiles is eagerly awaited by the members of the allied theatrical professions and it is common chatter that the cinema title-writers are helpless without it. When we last reprinted them a dozen of the flicker industry's better known wits telegraphed money orders and urged that copies of the interesting compilation be mailed to Hollywood. Since then various smiles from the book have proved to be film theatre silence-wreckers.

CUTEST THING BABY EVER SAID

I asked a friend's little daughter, aged 4, if she was a Republican or a Democratic. She looked at me in amazement and then said: "Oh, no I'm Jewish."

WHY I BLUSHED

While we were waiting for a trolley, I found I had only 5 cents left. I told my little sister to go into the car and I would drop a nickel for the both of us. I found a seat and told her to sit opposite. She exclaimed in her loudest voice, "You didn't pay for me, so I'm going to stand up."

A FRIEND OF THE POOR

Sir James Crichton Browne, the famous British physician and Fellow of Royal Society, says that extended experience of the banana has deepened his conviction of its food value. He regards it as a great boon to the masses. While retaining its place on the desert table of the rich, it has found its way into the hands of the poor. He concludes that its portability, palatability and digestibility are of immense advantage.

WHY DELAY?

Doctor—If this don't cure you, come back and I'll give you something that will.

Patient—Couldn't you give it to me now, doctor?

Affairs of the Heart and Your Marriage Problems

Do women want to be treated as partners in marriage or as pampered toys? Men are beginning to raise the question concerning American women.

Women do hold a privileged position here that is unknown in any other part of the world, but after all, it is the position that a woman holds in her own home that matters most to the women.

The resignation of husbands to certain demands made of them in the treatment of their wives is well known, but more and more it seems that women are getting to the point of actually wanting to share with their husbands the problems as well as the happiness of married life.

Women love chivalrous men. But many women have imposed on this very spirit that makes them so desirable.

The advent of the woman who sees her greatest opportunity for happiness in being a partner to her husband has made these other women who want to be toys seem insignificant and objects of pity.

Being a partner leaves no doubt in any one's mind as to the equality of the sexes—a matter that has been a sore spot with women for generations.

Dear Patricia Lee:

Sometimes I think my husband thinks I have no brains at all. He tells me about what a clever girl his secretary is and what a good business head his sister has, but he tells me I wouldn't understand when I want him to tell me anything about business. I sometimes am frightfully jealous on his account. I know he loves me, but I don't like to be treated like a child.—MARGUERITE.

Apparently your husband is one who likes to treat his wife like a plaything instead of as a partner, and as long as you feel the way you do about it, it is up to you to let him see that you are more than that. Some women expect the very thing from a man that you spurn, but I can't blame you for feeling the way you do. To try to let him see that you are capable of a sympathetic understanding in all his interests and even if some of them are a bit vague, be a good listener and you'll grasp a great many things that you heretofore did not understand.

My Dear Miss Lee:

I am 19 years old and have been keeping company with a boy 20 years old. Two weeks ago he went to a wedding out of town and he met a girl that he promised to keep up a friendly correspondence with. I objected and he said there is no harm in it and he is going to do it just the same. He said that he could have just written to her and not told me anything about it. He made a date with another girl, but did not keep it, and told me that if I kept on being jealous he won't like me and I do love him and know he loves me. I don't know what to do.—FRANCES.

It is easier to tell you to stop being jealous than it will be for you to get over your jealous tendencies, but you will have to do that very thing if you want to hold the man apparently. He has every right to carry on a correspondence with another girl and you have the same privilege. You are not engaged to be married, are you? Sometimes two young people get to appreciate better

Q. Is it necessary to send a wedding present when one receives an invitation to a church wedding?

A. It is never necessary to send a present—unless there is a sincere wish to send it. If, however, one is fond of the bride, or a friend of the family, one would naturally wish to send a gift as an expression of good will. Such a gift may be large or small—depending on one's means.

Q. When a person who is practically a stranger asks for a letter of introduction, how is one to refuse without offense?

A. It is far better to run the risk of offending the stranger than offending the friend, is it not? You really have no right to ask any one to honor a letter of introduction which you have written on behalf of a stranger. You might put it this way: "I think if you do not mind, I had better write and see if I cannot arrange to have Mr. A—call you; he is a very busy person."

BEWARE OF MARRIED MEN BY ARLINE DE HAAS

Copyright 1927, Warner Bros. Pictures Inc. BEWARE OF MARRIED MEN, starring Irene Rich, is a Warner Bros. pictureization of this novel.

SYNOPSIS

Myra Martin, secretary to Leonard Gilbert, a divorce lawyer to whom she is engaged, learns that her sister, Helene, is in love with Huntley Sheldon, whose wife, Nita, is divorcing him. Myra, disguised, goes to Sheldon to force him to release Helene. Discovers by Nita, she escapes unrecognized. Helene elopes with Ralph Naylor and returns to find that Sheldon has been to see Myra. Believing that Sheldon has some hold over her sister on her account, Helene goes to the man's apartment to confront him. At that moment Gilbert, Nita's lawyer and a family friend, arrives to discuss alimony with Sheldon. Helene, becoming frightened, hides.

CHAPTER XV—Continued

The house bell rang, interrupting the conversation. Its buzzing reached Helen's ears and she closed the door quickly and quietly, catching her breath. What could it be this time. At this rate she'd never get out of the apartment. She could hear Sheldon answer, and then tell some one to come up. Sheldon was as confused and as disturbed as Helene by the last call. His collar felt a little too tight and his face a little too hot. It was Myra, demanding that she be seen, and seen immediately. Good Lord, suppose Gilbert found his fiancée coming to his, Sheldon's apartment. He went, and made the sepulchre sure, sealing the stone, and setting a watch.—Matthew XXVII:66.

Homage Paid To Ghandi On Triumphant Tour Of India

(By Universal Service)
COLOMBO, Jan. 21.—Like the procession of a conquering king has been the visit of Mahatma Ghandi, the Indian Nationalist leader, to important cities of Ceylon. Ghandi has been here collecting funds for his Khudai movement, by which he seeks to stem the flow of Indian peasants from the rural villages to the industrial centers. He is sponsoring the establishment of "cottage industries" such as weaving.

Ghandi was received with great honor everywhere he visited, and addresses of welcome were extended to him almost without number. In an interview with Universal Service, the famous Indian leader opened the interview with either by concrete measures or through propaganda.

He also opposed British rule in India, but added that "if you mean that India should ally herself with Russia to drive the British out, then I don't favor that. It would be evil. It would be exchanging one master for another master. We want freedom. We want friends, ships, but we do not want a master."

Commenting on British rule in India in general, the Mahatma said he believed India would be happier if the British went away altogether. He added:

"I believe that is the only solution of India's problems, and not only the problems of India but also those of Africa. There is no halfway house to that solution, that I am convinced. It would be better, I admit, if the British remained as friends at the mercy of the Indians—and they would have to be at the mercy of the bayonet and physical force which keeps them there now—and did not demand for their past misdeeds."

HOPE FOR INDIA
"I admit, too, that there would be strife if they went independent. The trouble probably much more blood would be shed, but in the end it would find itself. The question is not whether we as to why India could not submit to cooperation with any force that is evil. My policy of non-cooperation is aimed at the forces of evil, quite irrespective of the individual or of the individual administration. I realize that the individual is not to blame."

"I do not care whether the administration is British, or whether from the Viceroy down to the doorman they are Indians—if they were representatives of an evil system I would not cooperate with them."

Hussein, In Exile, Pleads To Be Buried In Mecca

JERUSALEM, Jan. 21.—Forsaken by his allies, dethroned and exiled from the country over which he ruled, a prisoner on an island where he must eke out an existence to which death will bring a welcome end, a once powerful Hashemite monarch has expressed a fervent wish to rest in the soil which through the fortunes of war and post-war diplomacy, he forfeited.

The unhappy man is former ex-King Hussein, whom the British banished from Mecca to make room for the more powerful Wahabi chief, Sultan Ibn Saud, now king of the Hedjaz. Ordered for his "health" to spend the rest of his days in Cyprus, Hussein recently told his friends that as Napoleon at St. Helena would his remains to rest in French soil so he hopes to be returned to Arabia.

Bitter In Exile
The bitterness of his exile is not mitigated by the knowledge that the son who succeeded him to the throne long enough to be hurried out of it by Ibn Saud is exiling in Iraq. Another son sits on the Iraqi throne, a favorite with the British Foreign office with whom "treaties" are being concluded as with an "ally," although the "ally" is in fact not in theory a vassal of Great Britain, the Mandatory over Iraq. Another son from whom Hussein never had much beyond the final respect provided by the Koran, is Emir of Transjordan and there is talk of making him King of this territory if like his brother in Iraq he shows he knows how to behave.

Ibn Saud, the Master of Arabia, is no respecter of graves, and so it is possible that although he would not have the ex-king alive in his domain at any price, he will raise no objection to the broken old man's ashes resting in the hallowed dust somewhere between Mecca and Medina.

"THE FAIR CO-ED"

PRIVATE LIFE OF HELEN OF TROY SHOWN

Some highly interesting personalities are to be found in the large cast of "The Private Life of Helen of Troy," the big First National production which opens a limited engagement at the California beginning Monday.

One of the most famous of these is Maria Corda, who plays the role of Helen, as her first American picture. Miss Corda was a favorite actress on both stage and screen in Europe, and a dancer as well. She is the wife of Alexander Korda, director of the picture.

Lewis Stone, well known to the American screen, nevertheless has a background of color and interest. A veteran of two wars, Stone is now a major in the U. S. Reserve Corps. He has been a popular figure on stage and screen for twenty years.

Constantine Romanoff and Geo. Kotsanos, to look into other fields, are both well-known professional wrestlers; and, though both have done considerable picture work, they were chosen mainly for their sinister mean and oddities of facial architecture.

Mario Carillo was an Italian Count with a much longer and unpronounceable name. Gus Gus' Partos, Charles Puffy and Emilio Borgato are European actors of note; Gordon Elliott, late an extra man, was "discovered" by First National, as was Alice White, former script clerk and now a full-fledged actress.

"The Private Life of Helen of Troy" was adapted and produced for First National Pictures by Gary Wilson.

Other film features include "George Leaves Home," a roarsome comedy and "River Road" a scenic novelty.

'Her Wild Oat' Gives Colleen New Play Role

Did you ever take a 35 mile ride in a lunch wagon?

Colleen Moore tried it for her new starring comedy, "Her Wild Oat," at the California Theatre, Wednesday and Thursday, and reports it as being second only to parachuting, jumping in the matter of thrills.

Hooked to a high powered automobile, the big lunch wagon, with Miss Moore behind the counter startled citizens of Los Angeles as it zipped madly down busy streets, careening dizzily.

"Her Wild Oat" shows Miss Moore as the proprietress of the lunch wagon, which has its stand near Times Square, New York. With the money she has saved for years she seeks to satisfy her hunger for luxury with one week at an exclusive seaside resort.

Larry Kent plays the leading male role in support of Miss Moore, with Gwen Lee, Hiram Cooley, Richard Travers and others also playing important parts. John McCormick produced this picture, which was directed by Marshall Neilan.

"SPRING FEVER" WITH HAINES AT CALIFORNIA

Probably every golfer has a different way of playing golf. Certainly every comedian has a different way of making laughs; but the finest example of "different" entertainment—and golf is concerned in it—is at the California theatre today in "Spring Fever." William Haines' new Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer starring vehicle.

"Spring Fever" is one long, loud laugh. It starts when Haines as the shipping clerk, is discovered by the boss to be a golf expert. It runs through his trials and tribulations when the boss takes him to the country club, introduces him as a young millionaire, and proceeds to boast him as the coming champion. Cupid takes a hand and to does a rival for the lady of his choice. Even thing happen—and how!

There are a few thrills in the picture, too—and a great deal of clever golf stuff, all the way from exposition of trick shots to straight playing, and in between there are some hilarious parodies on the grand old Scotch game that would make even the austere inventor of golf roar with hilarity were he here today.

Joan Crawford makes a charming heroine in the new picture, and the cast is a remarkably chosen one. George Fawcett appears as the golfing boss, and Edward Earle as Haines' rival, the golf champion. George K. Arthur and Lee Moran contribute both give good account of themselves in all Eileen Percy, Bert Woodruff and others of note are seen in adequately enacted parts.

Other features include Felix the Cat in "Whys and Other Whys" Current news events Weigle's Californians, Larry Canelo at the organ and five big acts of road show vaudeville.

JESSE JAMES ON SCREEN AT THE CALIFORNIA

Finding Missouri scenery in California may seem like an impossible task, but all it needs is a little patience and a good automobile. Fred Thompson recently made this discovery.

For some weeks it looked as though Thompson would have to take a company to Missouri and build a reproduction of St. Joseph on the rolling plains. The plains would be necessary for the background and the reproduction would be required because of the changes that have been made in St. Joseph in the days since the James brothers were pursuing their spectacular careers during the production of the Civil War.

Photographs were secured from St. Joseph by Thompson and his production supervisor, A. L. Werker, and they started out to find a background like Missouri near Hollywood production headquarters. They located it on a high plateau on the eastern side of the Sierra Nevada Valley. It was settled by Middle Western people in the days following the first gold rush. They brought with them their ideas of architecture and built a town that closely resembled St. Joseph. It has been changed very little in the years since that time as it is off the path of travel and commercial expansion.

The backgrounds are mountains, but the town itself is so high they look like the rolling hills of Missouri. Many of the exteriors of Thompson's first Paramount picture "Jesse James" which reaches the California theatre Friday were made at this place.

OIL-MIX ROAD SURFACE WINS STATE FAVOR

SACRAMENTO, Jan. 21.—Bert Meek, state director of public works, has issued a statement strongly commending the oil-mix pavement and announcing that it will be extensively used in California in the construction of roads which do not justify concrete or asphalt pavement.

"The oil-mix surface, which has been adapted from a road in use in Oregon or several years, has satisfactorily met an important problem," said Meek.

"For now we are able to place a satisfactory surface upon those highways in the most isolated sections of the state which otherwise might not be removed from the class of 'dirt roads' for several years to come.

"The pavement is as smooth as any other, and it allows dust, thus meeting two of the prime requirements of a road from the motorist's point of view.

"We are going to continue constructing roads with this type of surface until every highway in California has either an oil mix, concrete or asphaltum surface.

"We appreciate the fact that this type of pavement would not be satisfactory in places where the travel is heavy. Therefore, as soon as traffic on any road reaches a point where the maintenance charges indicate it would be more practicable to construct a heavier surface, we shall do so.

"The oil-mix method has been developed by engineers of the state division or highways through extensive laboratory and 'field' experiments. Through similar to the Oregon oil-mix in many respects, it is believed by state highway heads to have superior resistive qualities.

"For these reasons, Meek believes that the pavement should have a definite classification, and the name 'California type pavement' has been suggested to him.

The improvement of lateral or secondary roads, as well as main roads is the subject of a bulletin just issued by the Highway Education Bureau, of Washington, D. C.

"With more than a million dollars a day pouring into the State highway treasuries from motor vehicle license fees and gasoline tax, political pressure is increasing for a wider application of this income and the inclusion of the lateral and secondary road in improvement programs to a larger degree than has been the rule in the past," the bulletin says, and continues:

Justification for this demand appears to be grounded on the fact that automotive income is derived not from the main road, but wholly from all roads, and that while there has been and still is an economic need for concentrating construction and maintenance effort on main routes, the time has arrived when the secondary road should be given a larger share of attention. Otherwise there will be a pyramiding of necessity for still heavier types of construction on main routes, to the further neglect of the lateral roads, for it is now a well demonstrated fact that traffic becomes more dense and loads jump in weight as fast as thickness and width are increased.

The question arises, therefore, whether it would not be better to get more roads into daily service by applying a larger share of the present highway income to the simple and inexpensive principle of better drainage on lateral roads, and thus spread traffic rather than increase its density by packing it still further into so-called main routes.

A study of progress charts is beginning to show that there is a trace of economic error in the prevailing belief that a road is not a road until it is paved, whereas it really becomes a road in a modern sense when it has been well drained and thereby brought into daily use.

WILLYS FIRM FACES RECORD IN PRODUCTION

With the eyes of the entire automobile world centered on Willys Overland, following the entry of the Toledo manufacturer into direct price competition with the lowest priced cars in the light car field, John N. Willys, president, has declared all plans have been carefully outlined for 1928 and that the company enters into the campaign in the strongest position in its history, according to Houtane and McQuone, local dealers.

"In spite of the tumult of competition, I feel assured that Willys-Overland will establish new high records in volume and profits in 1928," Willys stated. "Low Whippet service costs and facilities will make money even on normal production and with a greater volume of business assured our profits will be even larger."

Commenting on the sound structure of the company, Willys said, "In the last three years we have put into our five large plants a total of $12,500,000 in plant improvements and facilities. This notable investment has come mostly out of profits and only $3,600,000 was capitalized.

ASSETS LARGE
"We have been careful to protect our cash position and our last quarterly statement showed cash and cash items of $18,000,000.

"To meet our enlarged program for 1928 meant that it has been necessary for us to bring up to maximum efficiency the 149 buildings in our plants at Toledo, Pontiac, Michigan, Toronto, Ontario and Stockport, England.

"Immense economies are possible through the construction of our own bodies in our new body plant. This means, not only the elimination of the manufacturer's profit and transportation costs but also a great contribution to overhead.

Motorist Bags Big Black Bear In Humboldt

E. V. CARROLL, California hunter, with a 350-pound black bear, and the Oakland All-American Six sedan which he used to get his bear from the freight warehouse. This is one of the three bears which Carroll and his hunting companion, James B. Patterson, bagged on their last trip to Humboldt County.

"Our field stocks are lower than they have been in a long while at this time of the year, and the Whippet which has been a factor heretofore in the light car field is now headed for a position of leadership in this classification.

ON QUALITY BASIS
"Our entire manufacturing plant has been developed with the quality idea as their basis. Engineering will be by the same engineers who are responsible for the Willys-Knight and price leadership will be maintained on the same foundation as engineering leadership."

Willys also sounded a note that voiced unusual optimism over business prospects for the present year when he said:

"Every sound export who has made an analysis promises that the country is destined to enjoy a continuance of the splendid prosperity that has marked the years from 1923 to 1927. Our national wealth is increasing on an average of 15 percent a year so that as a nation we have a net worth of perhaps $350,000,000,000 against total debts of $18,000,000,000. This is a ratio of assets to liabilities of about twenty to one which constitutes a pretty good statement.

"Business is going to profit by the reduction of the income tax on corporations and it is a certainty we are going to see a reduction in the excise tax on automobiles and possibly its entire elimination."

Willys agrees with other leaders in the automobile industry that 1928 will be the biggest year in automobile history and that there will be manufactured 5,000,000 cars, a figure never before obtained.

NEW NUMBER SIGN SYSTEM STARTED HERE

The first of the new numbered signs that will soon mark main motor routes in California in conformity with the Federal number system of route designation was erected last week a short distance west of the city limits of Sacramento. The sign is one of the many that will designate route 40 from San Francisco through Sacramento to the Nevada line, and is the same number borne by this motor route across the continent under the Federal number plan, according to information brought to motorists here by a Buick scout party who participated in the erection ceremony.

"As a factor in aiding motor tourists travel, the number plan of designating highways is one of great value," said C. C. Kratzer, of the C. C. Kratzer company, local Buick dealers. "Its purpose is to simplify motor travel and to aid tourists in strange territory highways thus numbered can be followed without the slightest confusion. All Federal aid highways in the state, all of which are main motor routes and most of which connect with transcontinental highways, will be marked with the numbered signs.

"Although practically all Federal states have adopted this number plan, only three are marked. Absence of direction and mileage signs in states, than California is one of the few having their roads

RIGHT ON THE NOSE

By MICHAEL W. CASALE

If you were to ask the dyes in the wool turf fans to name the world's worst pony, I think they would string with Cork Elm. This plugger was honest enough, but he couldn't win races with honesty alone. The main trouble with him was the fact he couldn't run fast enough to keep out of his own way. He's generally finished ten of twenty lengths behind his nearest competitor. If he ever found himself in front he'd drop dead from the shock. Always a "good" last.

The bookies always put on the generosity gag whenever Cork Elm was billed to race. They would actually give you more than the market called for. On Cork Elm only. Maybe The Pullet, too. But let's not bother with The Pullet now. I'll never forget the day a certain bookie boosted the odds against Cork Elm from 50 to 1 to 100 to 1. "This is a real barometer for you players," piped the bookie, broken. "Remember, he's only betting 50 to 1. That's the way I do business with my clients."

Even at 50 to 1 the bookie couldn't get a ticket on the horse.

Cunningham will be remembered by local fans as having gone to the New York Giants from here and later farmed out to the Des Moines Club. At present it is reported Seattle is dickering to land the local boy's services.

Homage Paid To Ghandi On Triumphant Tour Of India

(By Universal Service) COLOMBO, Jan. 21.—Like the procession of a conquering king has been the visit of Mahatma Ghandi, the Indian Nationalist leader, to important cities of Ceylon. Ghandi has been here collecting funds for his Khaddar movement, by which he seeks to stem the flow of Indian peasants from the rural villages to the industrial centers. He is sponsoring the establishment of "cottage industries," such as weaving. Ghandi was received with great honor everywhere he visited, and addresses of welcome were extended to him almost without number. In an interview with Universal Service, the famous Indian leader posed the intervention of Soviet Russia in Indian affairs, either by concrete measures or through propaganda.

"I also opposed British rule in India," he added, "if you mean that India should ally herself with Russia to drive the British out, then I don't favor that. It would be evil. It would be exchanging one master for another master. We want freedom. We want independence. We want to be free."

"The unhappy man is former ex-King Hussein, whom the British banished from Mecca to make room for the more powerful Wahabi chief, Sultan Ibn Saud, now king of the Hedjaz. Ordered to leave his throne, Hussein fled to the rest of his days in Cyprus. Hussein recently told his friends that as Napoleon at St. Helena, he would like to remain in French soil so he hopes to be returned to Arabia."

Hussein, In Exile, Pleads To Be Buried In Mecca

JERUSALEM, Jan. 21.—Forsaken by his allies, dethroned and exiled from the country over which he ruled, a prisoner on an island where he must eke out an existence to which death will bring a welcome end, a once powerful Hashemite monarch has expressed a fervent wish to rest in the soil which through the fortunes of war and post-war diplomacy, he forfeited.

The unhappy man is former ex-King Hussein, whom the British banished from Mecca to make room for the more powerful Wahabi chief, Sultan Ibn Saud, now king of the Hedjaz. Ordered to leave his throne, Hussein fled to the rest of his days in Cyprus. Hussein recently told his friends that as Napoleon at St. Helena, he would like to remain in French soil so he hopes to be returned to Arabia."

Bitter In Exile The bitterness of his exile is not mitigated by the knowledge that the son who succeeded him to the throne long enough to be hurried out of it by Ibn Saud is exiling in Iraq. Another son sits on the Iraqi throne, a favorite with the British Foreign office with whom "treaties" are being concluded as with an "ally," although the "ally" is in fact if not in theory a vassal of Great Britain. The Mandatory over Iraq, another son from whom Hussein never had much beyond the final respect provided by the Koran, is Emir of Transjordan and there is talk of making him King of this territory. It is like his brother in Iraq he shows he knows how to behave.

Ibn Saud, the Master of Arabia, is no respecter of graves, and so it is possible that although he would not have the ex-king alive in his domain at any price, he will raise no objection to the broken old man's ashes resting in the hallowed dust somewhere between Mecca and Medina.

JAPAN DIET TO ENFORCE PEACE AMONG CHINESE

WASHINGTON, Jan. 21.—Japan considers China her own peculiar sphere of influence and will undertake to restore peace there, regardless of what action other powers may take according to a speech before the Japanese diet today by Baron Tanaka, former minister, which was made public by the embassy here.

The outline of policy was regarded by diplomats here as a clean cut declaration that Japan considers peace in China of vital importance to her own economic well being and will take any action necessary to end the revolution and resume the industrial exploitation of that country.

Merely from an economic point of view this is a matter of serious consequence particularly to Japan, which is most closely related to China. The baron said: "And should some people availing themselves of the chaotic state of affairs there endanger the lives and property of foreign residents and sap the foundation of our economic interests which our people have built up in that country by painstaking efforts for many years, we shall on no account tolerate such a situation."

"It is simply inevitable that we should take self-defensive steps if necessary in connection with developments of Chinese affairs of late we find a marked tendency in different parts of the country repeatedly to violate treaties in disregard to the protest of the powers, Japan cannot overlook this."

The premier made it clear that Japan intends to keep an iron hand on Mongolia and Manchuria especially the three eastern provinces which are vital to her interests and purposes Japanese governed now.

300-Foot Concrete Base To Support Mokelumne Dam

The Mokelumne River, which for centuries has been doing the same old thing in the same old way, has piled itself up and moved out of its ancient bed.

When once was the bottom of the river, workmen are now engaged in excavating for the district's big dam, and soon will be pouring concrete for the toe of it.

And meanwhile the river is flowing through a gigantic man-made flume constructed along the edge of the cliff and anchored there by huge steel cables to make sure it doesn't decide to move out during the spring floods.

First they built an enormous wooden box thirty feet wide, eighteen feet high and five hundred feet long. Then they constructed a coffer dam thirty feet high at the upper end of the dam foundation to divert the water.

Next they built a coffer dam at the lower end to prevent the water from backing up into the excavation.

These turned the Mokelumne into its new, artificial stream bed and set men and steam shovels to work in the old stream bed making ready for the foundation of the dam. The flume, one of the largest ever built for such a purpose, is carrying the entire winter flow of the river with ease and is expected to take all that the melting snows and rains have to offer in the spring.

I it does, all will be well for the Mokelumne construction company, which is responsible for the experiment. If it doesn't carry the water, the workmen and steam shovels will be defused and will have to move out to await subsidence of the floods.

The flume itself is well anchored to the adjoining cliffs, and is expected to stick no matter what happens. But whether it will carry all of the river dam when it is decided later, according to the construction company.

Work on the dam is proceeding satisfactorily, according to Arthur P. Davis, Chief Engineer and General Manager of the Utility District. Excavation work is well under way and pouring of concrete will start in the near future. The block of concrete in the bottom of the gorge upon which the dam will rest is about 20 feet thick. The completed dam will be 300 feet high and will be nearly a quarter of a mile long on the top, ranking with the great concrete dams of the world. It will create a mountain lake from which the East Bay cities will draw the water for their municipally owned water system.

Contractors have completed the four mile tramway to carry gravel for the concrete, and have swung a cable across the gorge for the transmission of materials from one side of the canyon to the other.

Work is being pushed on the Lancha Piana Tunnel, the Claremont Tunnel, the pipe line and the Lafayette Reservoir, other large features of the Mokelumne project still uncompleted, according to Davis.

NEW YORK MEN FAVOR DERBY HATS AGAIN

(By Universal Service)
NEW YORK, Jan. 21.—In men's fashions all things are relative and one change leads to another. For further particulars observe the startling sartorial gymnastics of the well-dressed New York man.

Well-dressed New York men have been trying to live up to their derby hats and their rather formal overcoats since the first of December and although the starched collar business is still in the doldrums to a greater or lesser extent by comparison with former years, there is a marked tendency to achieve a more rigid tone in masculine attire. Primarily, this change is due to the fact that the most popular overcoat this winter is a 3-button, double-breasted tube model of rather severe cut. To top off a combination of derby hat and double-breasted overcoat of dark material the men have turned to some sort of a stiff collar. The soft collars and the semi-soft models should not be worn with hard hats and such spruce outer garments as now have the call and many men are apparently beginning to grasp this fact. Last winter all manner of linen was worn with derby hats, but the effect of a rather costly outfit was very often completely spoiled by such laxity.

White Wing Collar
Universal notes that the well-garbed men encountered on Fifth Avenue and in the smart restaurants are again wearing a white wing collar, although this old favorite has been out of the running for years. Wings passed when the vogue for neck wear first took a violent hold on the masculine fancy but circumstances such as described above have had a tendency to bring wings into fluttering conspicuously again. Wing collars such as the men are wearing today with their new overcoats and derby hats are rather smaller than the original styles of such linen and they are also constructed along much more comfortable lines, with liberal opening at the Adams apple and low points that do not lacerate the neck. Another rather remarkable phase of the restoration of white wings is the popularity of four-in-hand neckties with such styles as are now available.

The fold collar has always been sharply criticized by men because it was difficult to bring a necktie under the fold without such profanity and possible destruction of silk or linen or both. The wing collar is the most easily handled of all styles and once a comfortable style is acquired the matter of wearing starched collars is simplified to the nth degree. In the fold collar very low models still predominate and there is no indication that men will ever get around again to the so-called "chocker."

Chinese Dictator Planning To Ascend Throne Of China

Peking, Jan. 21.—Twelve years ago the beautiful old arches, which span many of the more important Peking streets were refurbished and recolored in preparation for an important coup in the Chinese history. The renovations were carried out on the order of President Yuan Shih-kai, as he then was and the contemplated event was his assumption of the Chinese throne as Emperor Hung Hsien.

The order has again gone forth from a dictator living within the former Imperial Palace that these same pailous be repainted. The confidence is so striking that the naturally has not passed unnoticed. Does Dictator Chang Tso-lin nurture even a tiny spark of hope that he might found a new and more lasting Chinese imperial line than did the unfortunate Yuan Shih-kai?

PICKS SAME PALACE
Another point of similarity, between the two is the selection by Marshal Chang Tso-lin of the very palace which Yuan Shih-kai built for his residence. While the building is new, it is located in the heart of one of the largest and most beautiful of the old Imperial palace grounds, known in Chinese as the South and Middle Sea Palaces. This name comes from the two large artificial lakes, which practically fill the entire area within the high pink walls.

Whatever Dictator Chang Tso-lin's ambitions may be, he must daily look out upon two discouraging monuments to Chinese imperialism. Looking from his palace across the South Sea Lake, the dictator's eyes rest upon a tiny island, its sole connection with the mainland being a drawbridge. There not many years ago the stormy old Empress Dowager kept the Emperor Kuang Hsu a prisoner until he died. His sunshades were changed daily to prevent plotting for his release. He was the last adult to occupy the Dragon Throne. Naturally the sight of that island does little to encourage throne-like ambition.

GOLDEN CASKET
Turning away from that depressing island, Dictator Chang Tso-lin's eyes next fix upon a small Chinese building erected entirely of white marble with great red painted wooden doors. The building contains a single room and it was built by Yuan Shih-kai to contain the golden casket in which he proposed to place the name of the three emperors.

His new post is the second highest in the shrine temple and after having held the office, Horner will be in line for the highest position.

Robert Abernethy, the new recorder of the Aahmes Temple, is well-known in Richmond and Contra Costa county. He is the successor of the late George H. Smith, who was recorder of the temple for nine years.

Last Installment Of Fine Paid By Traffic Violator

Last minute payment of the balance of a fine imposed upon E. R. Coyle, 2929 Broadway, Oakland, last September, saved his arrest when he appeared in Justice of the Peace A. A. Alstrom's court and paid the fine yesterday. A fine of $25 had been imposed for speeding on charges preferred by State Traffic Officer Charles H. Nissen, but only $15 was paid at the time of the sentence.

The balance of $10 paid yesterday and an additional $10 in contempt of court, caused Judge Alstrom to withdraw bench warrants for the arrest of the man.
